DEATH OF SENATOR THOMAS S. MARTIN

Democratic Leader of Upper House Passes Away In Charlottesville

SERVING FIFTH TERM

Wore Himself Out in War Legislation as Head of Great Appropriation Committee.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 13.—Thomas Staples Martin, senior United States Senator from Virginia and Democratic leader in the upper house of Congress, died at the University Hospital here yesterday after an illness of eight months. He was 72 years old and was serving his fifth consecutive term in the Senate.

Senator Martin did not relinquish his active duties as minority leader in the upper house until the end of May, following an attack of influenza, which, with a bronchial trouble that developed in February, left him with a weak heart.

He entered the University Hospital June 1 and his physician, Dr. John Staige Davis, found some uraemia and diabetes. The latter disappeared under treatment, but a week ago uraemia returned and the heart began to grow weaker. Nausea set in yesterday, and as it became acute it was at once apparent that the end was near. The Senator fought to the last, however. Too weak hardly to stand, he left his bed more than once yesterday, and when time for the mid-day meal rolled around he made a bold attempt to partake of the food. His militant spirit amazed all in the sick room.

Senator Martin was almost certainly one of the victims of the world war. His position at the head of the Senate Committee on Appropriations during the period of greatest expenditure of revenue ever made by the government of the United States laid upon him burdens which could well have worn out a younger and more athletic man. The manner and the volume of expenditure were both matters of grave concern to a man whose methods were careful and exact and whose desire always was to protect the taxpayers of the country from unnecessary impositions. How much he saved the Government will never be known.

As soon as the armistice was declared, he spoke on the subject for the first time, counseling reduction of expenditures and more economic management. This was probable his last message to the great public he had served.

Until his election to the Senate by the State Legislature in 1894, Senator Martin had been a railroad attorney from a small town, who never before sought a public office. The State Legislature had chosen him in preference to one of Virginia's most popular and able citizens, the late Maj-Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. On March 4, 1895, he took his seat. His ability soon was discovered, and from the date of his advent into national politics he served continuously in the Senate, rising to the floor leadership of his party and chairmanship of the Important Appropriations Committee. He served in that capacity during the war Congress, where he was regarded as one of the leading figures of the Senate.

After a brief primary education in the Scottsville school, Martin entered the Virginia Military Institute in March, 1864. When the cadet battalion of the institute was mustered into the Confederate Army for the battle of New Market, Cadet Martin was ill in a hospital, and missed the encounter, but upon his recovery he rejoined his battalion and served until the end of the war.

In 1893 he was persuaded by the associates to enter the Senatorial race and, after a bitter fight was elected by the Assembly over General Lee. For re-election in 1901 Senator Martin defeated Gov. T. Hoge Tyler, another strong opponent. In 1904 the Democratic organization adopted the "primary plan" for election of Governor and Senators. This developed an eloquent and popular opponent in Gov. A. J. Montague and even Senator Martin's friends were doubtful of the outcome, as his ability as a debater and public speaker was unknown. Senator Martin "stumped" the State and achieved his third victory.

In 1912 he was opposed by the late William A. Jones, of the First Virginia Congressional district. He was unopposed in 1918 and entered upon his fifth term March 4 last.

On October 10, 1894, he married Lucy Chambliss Day, daughter of Col. C. Fenton Day, of Smithfield, Va. Mrs. Martin died about two years ago. They had two children—Miss Lucy Day Martin and Thomas S. Martin, Jr., He is also survived by two brothers—John S. Martin, of Fairview, the old family home at Scottsville, and Samuel T. Martin, of Richmond, Va.

For many years and until his death he was a member of the board of visitors of the Miller Manual Labor School, of Albermarle, a foundation created for the education or orphan children of that county, and for some years was a member of the board of visitors of the University of Virginia.

The following committee was named to attend the funeral: Senators Swanson, Lodge, Cummins, Knox, Hitchcock, Fletcher, Nelson, Overman, Bankhead, Robinson, Simmons, Smith (Georgia), Smith (Maryland), Underwood, Walsh, (Montana), Warren, Smoot and Williams.

HOPE FOR BEER AND WINE

Wets Encouraged by State Elections in New Jersey, Ohio And Massachusetts

Washington, Nov. 13.—Wets see a return of beer, ale and light wines in the distance, as a result of election returns from three States.

New Jersey elected a Governor, Edward I. Edwards, who ran on a wet ticket and announces he will oppose enforcement of prohibition in New Jersey, which has never ratified the dry amendment to the United States Constitution.

Massachusetts instructed legislators to legalize 4 per cent beer.

Ohio defeated a stringent prohibition enforcement measure, and apparently by a referendum has canceled the State Legislature's ratification of the Federal dry amendment.

If the Supreme Court rules that all States having referendum laws must vote on ratification, the number of effective ratifications will be cut to 34, two less than the necessary 36.

That would invalidate national prohibition.

Wets also claim the Secretary of State proclaimed national prohibition after the Ohio Legisature ratified, but before the thirty-seventh State ratified; that the Ohio vote therefore invalidates the proclamation because at the time it was issued, with Ohio crossed out, there were only 35 ratifications.

This contention, if upheld would, postpone national prohibition until a year after a new proclamation is issued by the Secretary of State, which would throw it after the next general election.

With that much of a toehold in John Barleycorn's attempts at a come back, wets were figuring that while whisky might be permanently interred beer and wine would reappear.

PIONEER METHODISM

Richmond, Nov. 13.—"Get back to the vision of pioneer days of Methodism." This was the watchword sounded to the ministers and delegates attending the Virginia Methodist conference, the opening meeting of which took place in Centenary Methodist Church Tuesday night.

Rev. George H. Spooner, D. D., of Danville, was the speaker and the call to the early standards of the church was voiced in no uncertain terms as one of the crying needs of the present age.

The futility of a life without the elements of spirituality, and the plea that Methodists of the present generation get back to the vision of the pioneer days of Methodism, and a positive declaration that nothing but the Spirit of God could change the heart of a sinner in spite of all the culture in the world today, were other high lights in the address of the speaker.

COMMUNITY SERVICE TO BE PERMANENT

Twenty-Five Citizens Effect Organization at Meeting Last Night

PLANS FOR PROGRAM

Homer H. Van Wie Leaves Work and is Presented With Silver—Frank S. March Succeeds Mr. Van Wie.

Community Service is here to stay. This was made known last night when some twenty-five representative citizens of Alexandria met at the Chamber of Commerce, and elected officers for the Alexandria Community Service as follows: C. C. Lamond, president; Capt. George H. Evans, vice president; Gardner L. Boothe, treasurer and Frank S. March, community organizer, secretary.

Practically all of the plans advocated by Mr. Van Wie and Mr. Marsh were adopted last night. Mr. Marsh, the new Community Organizer who arrived here last week, started the ball rolling with a few well chosen remarks concerning Community Service, and in short order the members of the General Committee were in a receptive mood.

Plans are being laid for a real program for Alexandria. L. H. Weir, executive secretary of the Washington War Camp Community Service, showed the vast possibilities of Community Service. A meeting of the General Committee was called for next Tuesday night, at the new Community Service headquarters, Prince and Royal streets.

Last night at the Chamber of Commerce the executive committee of the War Camp Community Service held its farewell meeting to bid Mr. Homer H. Van Wie "God Speed."

Mr. Van Wie, or "Van", as he was better known to all of Alexandria, leaves the field of his activities in of the W. C. C. S., which he has held for the past year and a half, and in token of their appreciation, the Executive Committee adopted the following resolution:

"The members of the Executive Committee desires to express their appreciation of the splendid service rendered the soldiers, sailors and marines in this community by the War Camp Community Service and would recognize the success attained in promoting recreation and hospitality for service men. The resources of the city have been organized and unified under the wise and efficient leadership of Secretary Homer H. Van Wie and by the co-operation of all the churches, fifteen including colored, and especially the ladies of the community, this war activity has ministered to the comfort, social entertainment and moral uplift of the soldiers and as a result a progressive and comprehensive program has been put on.

"The fine spirit, pleasing manner, and enthusiasm of the Secretary have won our confidence and co-operation and too much cannot be said in praise of his fidelity to duty and his unselfish devotion to the welfare and comfort of the soldiers while sojourning in our midst.

"His ministry in our city has been an inspiration to its civic and military life and soldier boys throughout the states and in other lands will hold a warm place in their hearts for him and his associates who did so much to maintain the morale of the soldiers and make life a little more pleasant under trying war time circumstances, illustrating a patriotic, united spirit of practical Americanism.

"Resolved, therefore, that the hearty thanks of the Executive Committee be tendered Mr. Van Wie for his faithful labors as Secretary of the War Camp Community Service and that we invoke the blessing of God upon him wherever duty may call to serve his fellowmen. Respectfully submitted,

John Lee Allison,
A. D. Brockett,
Thos. E. Dyson, Committee.
November 11th, 1919.

Then J. Y. Williams, in behalf of the committee in the most whole hearted praise, presented M. Van Wie with a handsome silver set of knives, forkes and spoons.

Mr. Van Wie responded, thanking the Committee and Alexandria for its hearty co-operation during the period of the W. C. C. S., here, and in a few well chosen remarks, wished that Community Service would be afforded the same support.

AFTERMATH OF MINERS' STRIKE

Deadlock May Follow Meeting of Men and Operators

RESULT UNCERTAIN

May Appeal to Attorney General to Interpret the "Washington Agreement—Ominous Reports Heard.

When miners and operators sit down at the round table in Washington tomorrow morning, to bring the conflict in the coal fields to an end, a deadlock probably will develop at an early hour.

They will meet at the Interior Department auditorium, but if that hall proves too small the Red Cross auditorium will be used.

Not a whisper has come from the operators to indicate that they will recede an inch from the Washington agreement, which sets miners' wages for the "duration of the war," and which they hold has not expired.

In this stand, they will be backed by the force of Judge Anderson's injunction in Indianapolis, which compelled the miners' leaders to call off the strike because the war period officially does not come to an end before the signing of the peace treaty.

The operators may appeal to the Attorney General to interpret the "Washingto agreement," and they know that this decision must hinge on the action that he took in relation to the strike.

In the meantime, ominous reports of inactivity are coming from the mining regions, showing that thousands of miners are preparing to await the outcome of the Washington conference tomorrow before returning to work.

The miners, fearing the effect their strike and subsequent events may have on the labor movement in general, will take their seats at the conference with an iron-jawed determination to fight it out to the last ditch, or wrest from the operators a fair measure of their demands.

Witnesses testified that Robertson was held up on the county road and his grip taken from him.

A. H. S. PLAYERS

Three Sketches to be Presented November 20-21

On Thursday and Friday, November 20th, and 21st, the High School players will be seen in three sketches: "The Revenge of Shari Hot-Su," "The Mouse Trap" and "Miss Civilization."

"The Revenge of Shari-Hot-Su," has its setting in Japan. The plot lies in a much complicated love affair, which of course, is straightened out in the end. The manner in which Shari-Hot-Su expresses himself with his confused knowledge of the English language and customs is very amusing and is guaranteed to satisfy.

"The Mouse Trap" is a good collection of wit and humor in a short space. "C'est tres drole" as the saying goes.

"Miss Civilization," a short but snappy sketch dealing with the round up of a "bunch of crooks" by the daughter of a raliroad magnate who proves that Civilization is bound to win in the long run.

The students have been endeavoring to make these sketches a success and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

LOCAL SCHOOLS TO OBSERVE DAY

Capt. W. H. Sweeney, superintendent of schools here, has pledged his co-operation toward making "Savings Day" in the schools November 17 a success. On that day it is planned to organize savings societies in every grade and every school room in this city where such clubs are not already in existence.

Superintendents of schools in practically every large city in Virginia are co-operating in plans for enrolling every school child in the state in a savings society on "Savings Day," and many division superintendets of county schools have also promised to try to complete their organization by that day.

Penny savings books and nickel savings books are being distributed among teachers, with the purpose of starting 250,000 Virginia school children on the road to saving and success. Harris Hart, state superintendent of schools, Governor Westmoreland Davis and the Secretary of the Treasury are much interested in the plan for a statewide "Savings Day" in the schools, and endorse it heartily.

SLAYS FORMER CONSUL

Wife is Also Wounded and Left for Dead; Plot Scented

New Orleans, Nov. 13.—Dr. Leopold Cordova, former Consul here for Honduras, was shot and killed and his wife dangerously wounded late Tuesday night by an unidentified man. Both were left for dead in a ditch on the outskirts of the city.

Dr. Cardova had "hundreds of bitter enemies," and his murder may have been the outcome of a political plot, Vincent Williams, secretary to the present Honduran Consul and formerly secretary to Dr. Cordova, said yesterday.

Mrs. Cordova, who regained consciousness, told the story of the shooting. She said that while Dr. Cordova was endeavoring to put his automobile into running order for a ride Tuesday night, a well dressed stranger approached and offered his assistance, which was accepted.

The man soon had the car running, Mrs. Cordova said, and asked for a ride into the city. The request was granted and the stranger drove the car into the extreme down town section. When Dr. Cordova questioned him, the stranger stopped the car and fired several shots at the doctor and his wife, who were in the rear seat. Dr. Cordova apparently was killed almost instantly and the bandit evidently believed Mrs. Cordova dead. He rifled Dr. Cordova's pockets and took jewelry from Mrs. Cordova's fingers.

THOMAS STAPLES MARTIN

While the friends of the late Senator Thomas S. Martin had long known that his services to his state and nation were drawing to a close, the recent fluctuations in his condition had caused many to hope that his death might, after all, be long deferred, and while his condition was such as to render it necessary for him to relinquish his duties in the upper house of Congress, it was hoped that he might view from afar the rapid changes in the nation, and by his long experience make suggestions which would prove practical in facing the numerous issues which now confront the body politic.

But the sands of his life were running low, and as the unwelcome visitor entered his room in the University of Virginia Hospital yesterday he engaged in a losing fight with the king of terrors. This great Virginian now lies stark and cold at his late home in Albemarle county.

A great man has fallen, one who for many years has earnestly labored in the interests of the Old Dominion and the nation. His death is not only a great loss to the state he has so faithfully represented, but to the country also.

Political friends and foes alike are now mingling their regrets at the passing away of this noble Virginia, one who enjoyed the respect and confidence of all with whom he came in contact. Editorials on the death of Senator Martin appeared in the papers of the capital city of the country today as well as in those of the larger cities of the states. They all concur in the conclusion that he was the victim of overwork.

The Senate adjourned yesterday afternoon after the announcement of his decase had been made; in that body Senator Swanson, in a brief eulogy, said Senator Martin's death was "a sacrifice on the altar of public service," superinduced by heavy duties in the Senate during the war. He paid high tribute to Senator Martin's character and service.

"In his death," said Senator Swanson, "a sturdy character has passed from public life.

"As minority leader, as chairman of the Appropriation Committee during the war, he assumed burdens and responsibility far exceeding his strength. Despite warnings of physicians and friends, he remained at his post."

In the death of Senator Martin, Mr. Swanson continued, the nation has lost "one of its wisest and most sagacious leaders," and Virginia "a beloved Senator."

Republican leader Lodge also declared Senator Martin had "worn himself out in public service."

As soon as the armistice was declared, a year ago, the late Senator spoke on the subject for the first time, counseling reduction of expenditures and more economic management. This was probably his last message to the great public he had served. Worn and broken by the cares of state, he entered the hospital at the University of Virginia to recuperate his vitality in order that he might continue his services to Virginia and the country at large in financial ways. But his course was at an end.

PRINCE AT MOUNT VERNON

The Prince of Wales, now on a visit to this country, is scheduled to pass through Alexandria this afternoon in an automobile for Mount Vernon.

The visit of his royal highness brings to mind the tour of a section of the United States by the grand father of the Prince, afterwards Edward VII., in 1860, fifty-nine years ago. He, too, made a pilgrimmge to Mount Vernon, not in an automobile, however, but on the "Harriet Lane," a government dispatch boat, which in those days played a part similar to that of the "Mayflower," at this time.

The present relations between the United States and the mother country were wanting in 1860, and the democratic administration made no provision for the entertainment of Albert Edward when it became known that he was to visit Washington. President Buchanan and his cabinet, however, looked after the prince, and although it may not be generally known, they assumed the expense of his entertainment.

It is said that Albert Edward had not at first included the United States in his itinerary, when he determined to visit the new world, he having no intention of proceeding outside of Canada, but his mother, Queen Victoria, insisted that he also visit certain cities of the United States especially Washigton while on this continent.

Another year had barely passed away when grave conditions existed between the United States and Great Britain. Commodore Wilkes in the man-of-war "San Jacinto," had stopped the British passenger and mail steamer "Trent," in the Bahama Channel and taken from that ship Messrs. Mason and Slidell, commissioners of the Southern Confederacy. The British government gave the United States seven days in which to deliver up those worthies. Had the demand been defied, the British Minister had been given order to leave Washington for London. The cloud, however, soon passed away through the diplomacy of William H. Seward, the Secretary of State.

ENEMIES OF PROGRESS

An Ohio paper recently said:

"The other day we heard a man cursing capital and wishing it was [illegible]." The paper in its comment very truly said:

"Poor fool, he had not intellect enough to know his own cursing made capital less fair and kindly. This world is not run by resentment, but by kindness and justice, which are the same. These moral conditions are just as regnant in the conduct of society as the natural conditions are in the physical world. It is ignorance, selfishness and ill will that are keeping the world back and preventing improvement along all the levels of life. The selfish man, the prejudiced man, the cursing man, the grasping man are the enemies of human progress. When we hear a man cursing every one but himself the we are certain that everybody is better than he is. He is the one in the way."

I. W. W. VICTIMS

If anything were needed to justify the wholesale arrest of the Reds by the government, the heinous and cowardly assassination of overseas men in an armistice parade at Centralia by anarchistic I. W. W.'s would provide this.

As the Baltimore American says, a more nefarious outrage has not been known in American history. The men were shot down while observing the first anniversary of service by themselves and other Americans in the fields of Europe. The act was undoubtedly premeditated, and may have been a part of a general plot in case such parades had been general throughout the country. That one of the murderers was promptly hanged was due to the certainty of his guilt and his leadership in the anarchist organization. Had not the men whose fellows fell before the bullets of the cowards given protection to all persons caught, others would have been summarily hanged by mobs. The authorities owe to the country the speediest trial and dispatch of every man under arrest or who may be placed under arrest against whom it may be proved that he was of the band of murderous conspirators, whether or not he committed any overt act. Nothing could have been done that would more surely pronounce the death of all Red organizations in the United States."

General Pershing is quoted as saying, "it is a serious outrage that veterans of the World War, parading in uniform in celebration of our national victory, should be shot down in cold blood, as was done in Washington Tuesday. Too drastic measures cannot be taken to rid our country of the class of criminals who inspire or commit such crimes."

THE CRIME OF PERJURY

A real effort is being made in certain cities, including Alexandria, to halt the crime of perjury.

It has long been admitted that it is a common crime, but Judges on the bench have rarely taken steps to halt or punish it, and prosecutors have winked at it by failing to proceed againsnt those who have brazenly resorted to it.

To perjury is due much of the growing lack of respect for law as administered in our courts. If it were treated as it deserves to be treated there would be more respect for law and less crime of every kind.

The prosecuting attorney and the Judge who would not hesitate to proceed against a murderer who killed his victim within the court room have been too prone to permit the perjurer to commit his crime under their noses and walk out unchallenged by the law.

WOULD TAX CHURCH

London, Nov. 13.—Observers of Great Britain's financial problems attach some significance to a suggestion made recently that the main burden of paying off the huge national debt created by the war should be laid upon the Church of England and the Church of Scotland, more particularly on the former. The proposal is that all their property, including Westminster Abbey, should be sold and converted into cash for the relief of the debt afflicted country.

"There is no reason," argues a writer, "why the Church of England should be supported by the whole population. It is not believed in by the whole population and, therefore, it has lost all right to exact support from those who do not attend its services. What is wanted now is that the whole property of the church, without exception, should be used for the freeing of the country from debt."

CUT IT IN HALF

Your family shoe bill for the year can be cut in half, and more. A good way to prove this is to keep account of how long a pair of shoes lasts after we have repaired them for you. If they last as long as, or longer than, the new pair, you can easily figure the savings. It's a big item, believe us!

SELLING PANIC

Paper Fortunes Wiped Out as Result of Big Advance in Call Money Rate.

New York, Nov. 13.—The end of the most frenzied speculation in Wall street history was written yesterday, when a veritable torrent of liquidation swept prices of the more volatile industrial stocks downward in a crash such as has not been witnessed since the peace panic.

For 41 minutes after the gong had ended the close of trading on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange the stock ticker continued to whir out its sensational story of paper fortunes, built up through months of unprecedented booming, wiped out in a few hours of demoralization. For while the standard stocks were sufficiently stable to prevent anything like a real panic, there was no doubt that the whole market was demoralized when trading ceased. Veteran speculators could not remember a time when the ticker was so far behind the market as it was at the close yesterday.

RULE DRY LAW INVALID

Courts Grant Injunctions to Distillers and Brewers

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13.—Attorneys for distilling interests apparently won another round in the fight on wartime prohibition in Federal court here yesterday. Judge Evans in the course of arguments in a case brought by Louisville distillers announced from the bench his belief that the law is unconstitutional and at the conclusion of the pleas of attorneys said he would issue an injunction today restraining government interference with the sale of the distiller's tax paid whisky. Whether the injunction would be temporary or permanent, the court said, rested with Attorney General Palmer, whose office was given until today to advise with the district attorney at Louisville.

If a temporary writ is issued rules of procedure would permit various delays in its operation pending arguments on a motion to make it permanent. If permanent, only a writ of supersedeas, it was said, could prevent the Louisville distillers arranging for immediate disposition of their tax paid whisky. This feature apparently was the only point at issue with Judge Evans, who called upon the government to make a showing for it if it desired to do so.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 13.—Judge Arthur L. Brown in the Federal district court yesterday issued a temporary injunction against Harvey A. Baker, United States attorney, and George F. Shaunessy, collector of internal revenue, restraining them from enforcing the provisions of the war-time prohibition act. The injunction was issued upon the petition of the Narragansett Brewing Company.

The sale of 4 per cent beer was immediately resumed by Providence liquors dealers.

CLOTURE RULE

Both Sides in Senate Are Anxious to Prevent Filibustering on Treaty

Proposals to invoke the cloture rule for the purpose of shutting off debate on the treaty and bringing the question of ratification to a final vote found considerable support among Senators yesterday.

Two distinct proposals of cloture were made, one by Senator Underwood on the Democratic side and the other by Senators Kellogg and Hale, Republicans. It was said that thirty-five Democrats were willing to sign up for cloture, and that almost as many Republicans would make a similar agreement.

Under the rules, sixteen Senators may present the proposal of cloture to the Senate, but the vote of two-thirds is necessary to put in force. Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, said that although he had not been approached with any proposal for limiting debate, he did not doubt that there would be enough votes to invoke the cloture rule if it should be presented to the Senate.

The movement to institute the rule for limited debate was brought about by the fear that a filibuster was to be made which might prevent final action on the treaty at this session of Congress. Only nineteen days remain before the extra session must dissolve and the regular session convene.

RICHMOND THEATRE

"Please Get Married," featuring Viola Dana tonight at the Richmond is a gale of hilarity. It is racy but it isn't shocking. It is replete with humorous situations, and its multitude of bright lines will "get over" from the screen as well as they did from the stage. The story is one novelty after another, one misadventure after another when two young people start out on a bridal tour that becomes a series of interruptions—embarassing interruptions. They hardly get a chance to kiss, and they can't spoon at all.

At the Ingomar tonight Douglas Fairbanks will be seen in "Double Trouble."

"Why I Put Up With Rats for Years." Writes N. Windsor, Farmer.

"Years ago I bought some rat poison, which nearly killed our fine watch dog. It so scared us that we suffered a long time with rats until my neighbor told me about RAT-SNAP. That's the sure rat killer and a safe one." Three sizes 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold and guaranteed by R. E. Knight and Son, Alexandria; Mankin's Store, Falls Church.
